*The snowman
cometh . . .*

Computer Science major Bill Beacom found a friend on the hood of his car last week. Fellow C.S. majors Pat Scuba, Ed Tiegle, Steve Lendt, Greg Gerke and Scott Shurts opened their first art class and sculptured the snowman on Beacom's car. Why did they do it? "So he would always have somebody to ride with him," they said.

Miller residence vacant; home intended for Weber

By Anne Pritchard-Walsh and Roger Hamer

The house originally intended to become the UNO chancellor's dream home is currently being used as an entertainment center, at least temporarily.

Located at 6445 Prairie Ave., the $230,000 colonial-style home was donated to the University of Nebraska Foundation by Mrs. Phoebe Miller in September 1977.

In a written agreement with the Foundation Miller requested that the house be used as the UNO chancellor's residence. Should the chancellor decline to use the house, the agreement stated that the Medical Center's chancellor be given the opportunity to use the residence.

If the house remains unoccupied, the Foundation has the option of selling the Miller home.

Though the house is located two blocks north of UNO, Chancellor Del Weber said he will not move in.

"We've lived here (in Omaha) for five years and we have our own home," Weber said. "If it were our first year here it would be a different story. The Miller house is meant for the chancellor's residence, but we elected not to do it."

The university allocates $600 per month to the UNO chancellor for a housing allowance.

Because the new Med Center chancellor has not been selected, the house is being used as an entertainment center for both UNO and Med Center activities. The Med Center plans to select a new chancellor later this month.

According to Weber, the possibility of the new chancellor occupying the house has not yet been discussed.

"It's a matter to be worked out by the Board of Regents," Weber said. "Clearly, the intent of the home was to become the residence of the UNO chancellor."

Ronald Roskens, president of the University of Nebraska, talked with Morris Miller about the possibility of donating the house to the university.

Miller, the son of Phoebe and Max Miller, met with then UNO Chancellor Roskens several years ago and was enthusiastic about the idea of a permanent chancellor's residence.

"First of all, the location is ideal," Roskens said. "Donating the home to the university was a great gift of generosity by the family."

The Miller house was built in 1931 by John and Frank Latenser, who also designed the Joslyn Art Museum. The home has three fireplaces, a library, living room, full dining room, kitchen, utility room and a butler's pantry.

"I've tried to assure people that we wouldn't do anything to change the neighborhood; it's not in our best interests."

The upstairs has two suites, each with a bedroom and bathroom, and a guest room with a bathroom. There is also a housekeeper's apartment above the garage complete with living room, bedroom and bathroom.

"The house has a lot of character," said Weber. "Any person living in the home could add their own touches."

When the Foundation acquired the home, it was agreed that the aesthetic appearance of the neighborhood would not be altered. "We had to give reassurance to the neighbors that UNO's using the house would not detract from the overall neighborhood," Roskens said.

Roskens added that should the Foundation decide to sell the house, care would be taken to insure that the house would be sold to responsible parties.

Weber spoke of an incident that was particularly upsetting to the neighbors. "Rumor had

Computers could simplify administrative procedures

By Kevin McAndrews

Nebraska University officials are exploring the possibility of computerizing several administrative processes such as registration that are currently done by hand.

UNO officials requested permission from NU Central Administration to allow bidding on the administrative computer equipment that would cost more than $300,000, said Richard Snowden, director of UNO computing services.

"We want to totally automate anything done by the registrar and in the various colleges," said Snowden. "We are the only ones (university) driving for this. We feel this automation need is immediate."

Registration would be one administrative process that would change if automation is authorized, said Snowden.

"It is our greatest need in the area of registration," said Snowden. "We wouldn't need the floor space previously used in the fieldhouse."

Computer terminals would be used for registration, he added, and would possibly be located in the Fieldhouse.

"The machine will become a catalog, keeping a record of the availability of classes," said Snowden. "If a class has been filled, the computer will give options for the same class at a different time slot that could be worked into your schedule."

He said the computer would "contain the flexibility for obtaining information for any class a person would be interested in."

Central Administration also wants to automate its student information service, said Howard Ottoson, NU executive vice president for academic affairs.

"We want to sort out UNO's needs as compared to Central Administration's needs and make sure they are compatible so

Deaf students offered interpretive services

By Roger Hamer

Most of us enjoy the ability of hearing and may even sometimes take it for granted, but others are not as fortunate and suffer from partial or total loss of hearing. This problem can also affect the quality of higher education for deaf people.

Previously, deaf people who wished to continue their college careers were limited to enrollment in two colleges: Northridge (Cal.) and Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. These were the only two liberal arts schools in the country that offered interpretive services for the deaf.

Midwesterners who are deaf may now attend UNO and receive assistance in the form of interpreters. UNO began an interpreter's program last August which is designed to provide deaf students with in-class assistance.

Barbara Ludtke-Stahlman, a UNO assistant professor who heads the Hearing Impaired Program within the Counseling and Special Education Department, said deaf people have enough obstacles in life. "We (society) don't do a good enough job of educating deaf people," she said.

UNO was an ideal locale for an interpreter's service for the deaf because of both the proximity of the Nebraska and Iowa Schools for the Deaf and the large number of deaf people residing in the Omaha area, according to Ludtke-Stahlman.

In 1973, Congress passed Bill 504, which required that handicapped people be granted equal accessibility to public buildings. Included in the law was equal accessibility to college courses.

Some funding for interpretive services is covered under Vocational Rehabilitation (V.R.) services. However, V.R. funding is limited to undergraduate students exclusively. Graduate students and teachers wishing to renew their certifications were not eligible for federal assistance.

Federal funds are not used for tutoring purposes or to cover the cost of education, according to Ludtke-Stahlman. Financial assistance is used for in-class interpretation, assistance in registering for classes and one visit with an advisor. Without assistance in these three areas, deaf students would have a tough time at registration.

The system of finances prompted Barbara Hewins-Maroney, coordinator for Special Programs, Joe Davis, Vice Chancellor of Student Developmental Services, Ludtke-Stahlman and Richard Hoover, Vice Chancellor for Student Services, to meet with representatives of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Agency (CETA) to help provide interpreters for college students.

The Reagan Administration's failure to continue funding for CETA two years ago prompted the UNO delegation to visit UNO Chancellor Del Weber in search of financial assistance. "The lack of federal funding caused us to seek other means of paying for interpreters," said Hewins-Maroney.

Ludtke-Stahlman added that Weber was receptive to the idea. "We originally asked for a $10,000 budget," she said, "but we only got $5,000 for 1982-83."

The passage of 504 was not a determining factor in UNO's instituting the Hearing Impaired Program. Ludtke-Stahlman said, "504 was definitely a public relations move. The legality was not motivational at all. We thought it might be, but we didn't push 504 when we went to the Chancellor."

Last fall was the first semester in which interpreters accompanied deaf students to classrooms. Two students used the services in addition to four students who received services through other sources. This semester, Ludtke-Stahlman said seven deaf students inquired about the program.

Donald Cushenbery, professor of education, was an instructor for a Tests and Measurement class in which a deaf student enrolled. "At first some of the students were distracted by the interpreter" he said. "But that lasted for about a week and then everyone adjusted."

While not involved in the special educational program, Cushenbery said he tried to involve the deaf student as much as possible through the interpreter. "If she needed extra help, I told her to come in with the interpreter," he said. "I think the key is the attitude of the instructor as is how the other students react to the situation."

"You have to make sure they get the same chances that everyone else is entitled to," he added.

Hewins-Maroney said the skill level of the interpreter is vital to the deaf students' learning in the classroom. "Some subjects may be so involved and complex that if the interpreter doesn't have the background to completely explain lectures the student will have a tough time in the class," she said.

Ludtke-Stahlman said of the seven deaf students enrolled this semester, four are graduate students using the "chancellor's money" while the others are eligible for V.R. money.

"Not many of the deaf people are educated well enough to make the jump to college," she added.

Carpool funds to end

Metro Area Transit (MAT) will discontinue its effort to coordinate citywide carpools at the end of this month due to a cut in federal funds.

On Dec. 23, the MAT Board of Directors dropped the program because they did not want to bear the financial costs alone, said John Bogue, supervisor of Carpool. A drive to raise funds for the program fell short of a projected $80,000.

The drive, supported by business and the private sector, raised $12,000, said Bogue. MAT wanted to raise $40,000 from the private sector and would have matched this amount to save the program.

UNO Campus Security and MAT coordinated a final effort to recruit carpools before the start of the semester. Lieutenant of Auxiliary Services for Campus Security, Paul Kosel, said 1,600 copies of Carpool matching request forms were sent to all UNO faculty and staff members.

When Campus Security receives completed matching request forms, they are given to MAT for computer analysis. Interested carpools are referred by MAT to other carpools who live in the same area.

So far 12 people have responded to the drive, said Kosel. He expects more forms to return from the faculty after they return from vacation.

This is the first time Campus Security has actively supported the carpool program through an extensive drive, said Kosel. Though MAT will end its involvement Jan. 31, Kosel said Campus Security will continue to provide parking places for carpools.

Carpool stickers are $25, increased from $15 last semester.

that we don't have unnecessary duplication," said Ottoson, who is also the NU interim executive vice president and the dean of the graduate college.

UNL is currently working on a modular computerization schedule called Interim Registration Information System (IRIS). This system keeps all student records in a data base.

Ernest Kovaly, assistant vice president and university director of computing, said UNL is two-thirds of the way to completing efforts to automate their administrative duties. IRIS planning started five years ago, he added.

Ottoson said the technical problem of implementing automation "is defining university-wide student need and what UNO and UNL need." What we would like to do is reconcile the university wide interests and see if we can't work in tandem."

Ottoson said Central Administration would "work as fast as we can" to make a decision on whether to allow bidding to begin. He added that if the computer hardware and software were purchased, it would still be another year before present records could be filed into the system.

Snowden said he expects a decision sometime in January on the possibility of computerizing several administrative functions.

Gateway co-editors introduce new staff

A new semester always brings changes, and if you'll direct your kind attention to the Gateway's new staff box, you'll notice a definite difference.

People! A lot more people. More ideas, more talent and more creativity will (hopefully) combine to bring a more innovative newspaper to students this semester.

We, Anne Johnson and Anne Pritchard Walsh, will be co-editors, a first for the Gateway. Walsh will lead Wednesday's paper, which will offer news and expanded editorial pages.

Johnson will head Friday's Gateway, which will offer features and entertaining columnists.

We're supported by a talented crew, whose numbers have increased for this semester's effort.

Roger Hamer and Kevin McAndrews will nose out all the news that affects the university's students, faculty and administration.

Jan Olson-Kelley and Chris Mangel will cover a wide variety of feature ideas, both on and off campus.

Henry Cordes and Paula Thompson will bring readers all the final scores, as well as interviews with players and coaches.

Linda Shepard will spend her days in the darkroom, when she isn't out taking pictures.

Karla Anderson will scrutinize our copy for those rare, unprofessional errors.

Nancy Ferrara's tremendous salesmanship makes all things possible. She's ably assisted by her ad staff: Kathy Heafey, Mary Fellows, Diane Ishii, Patty Mangiameli and Michele Romero.

The staff is ready, we just need one more element ... WRITERS! Call us please, we need you!

We anticipate a great semester, and look forward to hearing from our readers. You'll recognize us soon; we'll be putting faces with names in our staff photo next week.

College melting pot is still an ideal

Racial harmony eludes generations

Autherine Lucy Foster could barely control her excitement as she escorted her 18-year-old daughter, Angela, through the University of Alabama campus in the fall of 1981.

Autherine Lucy, after all, had been the first black enrolled at the university back in 1956, not long after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional the "separate but equal" doctrine for education of white and black students. School officials had expelled her five days after classes began, on grounds that she had incited riots.

Nonetheless, while George Wallace no longer blocks school-house doors, college campuses have yet to become the harmonious melting pots that most prospective students assume they are.

It's not only that the ivory tower has been sullied recently by a series of ugly racial incidents. Death and rape threats at Harvard, cross-burnings at Williams, racist "parodies" at Dartmouth, and the formation of a white supremacist group at Southern Methodist University are mere symptoms of deeper divisions between races on campus.

Lacking interest or incentive to learn more about others, today's students seem more willing to let the gulf between the races widen again.

After a generation of minority recruitment and enrollment, colleges can't shake what seems to be a predilection among students for self-imposed segregation. Across the country today, separatism is as inherent to college life as frat parties and kegs.

Many students today are dismayed that whites and blacks often eat and study separately, socialize independently, and produce a different yearbook. Most whites can leave college without knowing a single black.

Recalled Angela Foster, who dropped out of Alabama this year for financial reasons: "I was never the target of any direct slurs or threats, as my mother was. But there wasn't much mixing between the races. You'd never go to a party that was held in a white dormitory."

Increasing numbers of students, however, aren't fazed by separatism. A 1980 survey of white freshmen at the University of Maryland, which is respected nationally for its work in student race relations, revealed that students there endorsed the concept of integration but did not "tend to endorse actions which would further integrate their own environment." Lacking interest or incentive to learn more about others, today's students seem more willing to let the gulf between the races widen again.

One cause of separatism is that blacks and whites view racism differently. A participant in the half-day moratorium at Williams College that followed a cross-burning there two years ago was startled by the perception gap: "When whites talk about racism here, they mention how blacks eat separately at dining hall tables," he told us. "When racism comes to our minds, we talk about lynchings, killings and unemployment rates. It's a different world."

Another problem may be that today's students have a mean streak. Said William Sedlacek, who oversaw the Maryland study: "There's no doubt that today's college students are less tolerant of their black peers. We surveyed freshmen attitudes 12 years ago, a majority said that a bigot was the worst thing that anyone could be. This year, there was a long list of types — liberals, thieves, communists — considered worse than a bigot."

Conscious of bad publicity, many institutions have convened "task forces" to assess the separatism problem, as well as well-intentioned housing policies that have helped to spawn segregation.

Yet, continued separatism should signal to administrators that some lessons need repeating. Few of today's collegians know much about the efforts of those — like Autherine Lucy Foster — who pried open the doors for minorities to higher education.

If American young can't learn that coexistence is something to be worked at by all, America in the '80s may be no better off than it was in the '50s. Improvement, of course, won't be forthcoming as long as students only hear the same old messages.

Professor, conservative debate nuclear freeze idea

'Freeze would halt nuclear madness'

Russell Palmer is chairman and professor of Philosophy and Religion at UNO.

By Russell Palmer

The most important issue humanity now faces is how to stop the nuclear arms race. One proposal that is attracting increasing support is the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Proposal, usually called "the Freeze" for short.

It calls for the United States and the Soviet Union to call a mutual halt to the testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons and delivery systems. This would be a first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war and reducing the nuclear arsenals on both sides.

Among the reasons in favor of this proposal are the following:

First, the Freeze would be bilateral. It does not propose unilateral disarmament by the United States. On the contrary, it calls on both superpowers to stop producing more nuclear weapons.

Second, the Freeze would be verifiable. It is not a matter of naively trusting the Russians, because a freeze on nuclear missiles and aircraft can be verified by existing means. The United States has an elaborate satellite detection system. Our satellites can now read the license plate on a car in downtown Moscow!

In fact, a total freeze could be verified more easily than more complex arms control agreements like the SALT treaties (or the START proposals). Instead of having to monitor various ceilings on different kinds of weapons, the Freeze requires a total end to more nuclear weapons. Such an across-the-board ban would be simpler to verify because any testing or production activity would indicate a violation.

What many people do not realize is that the Soviet Union has a good record of compliance with the arms control agreements we have negotiated with them over the last 20 years (beginning with the Limited Test-Ban Treaty under President Kennedy).

Another reason for the Freeze is the nuclear parity that now exists between the two superpowers. A lot of people in this country have the impression that the Russians are currently ahead of us in the arms race. But according to the Defense Department annual report for 1982, the United States and the Soviet Union are roughly equal in strategic nuclear power.

The United States has more than 9,000 strategic nuclear warheads, each one of which can burn the heart out of a city. This stockpile is the equivalent of more than half a million Hiroshima bombs. With this stockpile we could destroy the entire population of the world 12 times over. Yet we continue to produce more nuclear warheads at the rate of three a day.

The competitive momentum of the arms race has caused the Soviet Union, formerly far behind the United States in strategic nuclear weapons, to build a correspondingly devastating arsenal (about 7,000 warheads).

The Soviets have chosen to put most of their effort into land-based missiles, while we have concentrated more of our strength in relatively invulnerable submarines. But when all categories are examined together, the total is roughly the same.

Now that's not enough for some people! They want the United States to be far ahead. But that strategy ignores the history of the arms race, — that is, whatever each side does is always matched by the other side. The "logic" of the arms race is that the more nuclear weapons we build, the more they will build, and vice versa. The result, ironically, is that both sides are less secure than before!

The Freeze would call a halt to this madness. The United States and the Soviet Union already have more than enough nuclear weapons to destroy each other many times over. The question is not, "Who's ahead?" The question is, "How much is enough?"

History has taught us that people seldom create armaments that are not eventually put to use. It is unrealistic to think that we can keep on escalating the nuclear arms race and not have nuclear war as a result.

'Soviet arms edge insured by freeze'

Pat Haller is president of Buttercup Foods, Inc., and chairman of the Nebraska Conservative Union.

By Pat Haller

The obvious question concerning the Freeze movement is — Why now? Where were the "Freeze" advocates during the last 10 years of massive Soviet buildup? Since the signing of the SALT agreement, the Soviets have introduced an unprecedented array of new strategic weapons into their arsenals. Included in this arsenal are the SS-17, SS-18, and SS-19 ICBMs, the Typhoon and Delta submarines, several new types of submarine-launched missiles, and the Backfire bomber, not to mention the deployment of some 600 intermediate range ballistic missiles aimed at Europe. During this same period, the United States exercised restraint and introduced only the Trident missile and submarine and the cruise missile.

— This trend has been harmful to the security interests of the United States and its allies, and to global stability. It is not just a question of numbers. As their military capability has grown, the Soviets have increasingly resorted to the use of military force directly, or through proxies such as Cuba, to intervene in areas farther and farther from their borders. The increased assertiveness of Soviet behavior — the invasion of Afghanistan, pressure on Poland, involvement in Africa, support for insurgency in Central America — reflects the growing Soviet confidence in their military capabilities.

A freeze would be dangerous to security, stability and the cause of peace for the following reasons:

— A freeze at existing levels would lock the United States and allies into a position of military disadvantage and vulnerability. They now have the capability of destroying at large part of our ICBMs, and they have about 600 intermediate range missiles threatening Europe not offset by any comparable U.S. system.

— A freeze would make significant arms control more difficult. The Soviets would have little incentive to agree to reductions in nuclear arms if they felt they could freeze the existing military situation. This was demonstrated by their refusal to negotiate while steadily deploying 300 of the giant SS-20 missiles until we had taken steps to offset the threat with our MX system.

— A freeze on all testing, production, and deployment of nuclear weapons would include important elements that cannot be verified. The practical result is that the United States would live up to a freeze in all its aspects, while there is considerable doubt that the Soviets would also live up to it. They have broken many treaties before, and even at this minute are using germ warfare in Southeast Asia despite their signature to the contrary on three separate agreements. We simply cannot afford to base our national security on trust of the Soviets.

— Lastly, a freeze is not good enough. What the world really needs is an overall reduction in the numbers of nuclear arms and President Reagan has proposed some bold initiatives to this end. A freeze would simply wipe out any possible incentive for the Soviets to participate in real reductions, since they would have a great advantage by just standing still.

Fate of $230,000 chancellor's dream house undecided

gotten out that we intended to put sidewalks in and the neighbors were concerned that sidewalks would ruin the character of the neighborhood," he said. "I've tried to assure people that we wouldn't do anything to change the neighborhood; it's not in our best interests. I think the neighborhood will be pleased."

The possibility of using the residence to house visiting lecturers was discussed, but because of security difficulties, the idea was discarded. "If we were using the home as a hotel, we would need a staff," Weber said. "We'd lose a lot of security with people coming in and out."

According to Weber, the house will be used this spring for entertaining special guests and faculty. "The home has given us an added dimension," he said. "It's very convenient for people and very convenient for food service because it's only a block away."

Ed Hirsh, vice president of the Foundation, said the Foundation has agreed to renovate the home. He said the Foundation will spend $20-25,000 to renovate the kitchen and install a sprinkler system on the grounds.

Weber added, however, that the house is structurally sound and does not require any major renovation.

Since UNO rents the home for one dollar per month from the Foundation, the university assumes monthly maintenance bills. Gary Carrico, vice chancellor of Business and Finance, estimates that the total cost for utilities, telephone, insurance, and minor repairs is $300-400 per month.

He added that this figure does not include real estate taxes and that the Foundation is currently attempting to get a tax exempt status on the home.

Weber said UNO has used the home for entertaining six times through November and December and the Med Center has used it twice.

"It's an awkward situation now," Weber said. "There is going to be a day when it will be a lovely home for the chancellor of this university."

Late night commentators offer best in television news

By Joseph Brennan

It's probably a good thing that Ronald Reagan goes to bed early, for if he stayed up late enough to watch NBC News Overnight he'd be on the telephone to Linda Ellerbee and Bill Schechner instead of Dan Rather.

White House aides may complain loudly about the evening network newscasts, but it is the six-month-old Overnight that is hitting the president the hardest, especially on unemployment.

And that's fine with me. Correspondent Ellerbee and Schechner combine superb writing, wry senses of humor, and an assortment of national and international reporting to sock it to Ronnie, their favorite target.

It's interesting that NBC, which produces the most boring evening newscast, has come up with the best solid hour of television news. And they do it without flashy, excessive graphics or five anchormen on the air.

No one gets the impression that Ellerbee and Schechner (and Lloyd Dobyns previously) are the naughty kids of the network being punished with a 12:30 a.m. starting time and a comparatively small budget. All they have — I picture the manikins at CBS' Nightwatch gasping at the thought — is their wits and good old-fashioned hard-hitting reporting.

To be sure, there are a few gimmicks, such as the segments titled "Not-Ready-For-Prime-Time News" and "Once Overnightly," but you'll find none of the cheeriness and superficiality of Good Morning America on this program. The message is simple: the world is a horrible place, and we will tell you that over and over again. It is as though Holden Caulfield grew up to be a newsmen.

From the pictures of leeches feasting on the dead in the Beirut massacre to the plea of a black man in Miami for racial justice, Overnight is relentless in its reportage of the state of the human condition.

There is no CBS "theory of momentism" at work here, either. "Momentism," as defined in an Esquire magazine article about Dan Rather and CBS producer Van Gordon Sauter, is the attempt to present at least one story a night about some wonderful triumph of the human spirit. Overnight reminds us that those triumphs are rare or fleeting. There's no Charles Kuralt to warm our hearts at this time of the night; instead we're treated to a story about a former priest who now sells kinky sexual aids.

Beyond the bleak vision of Overnight, viewers can expect to see numerous stories, in depth, that rarely wind up on the evening news. In addition, the program offers excerpts from the BBC and French, Canadian, and East European television, among others. This international reporting is usually contrasted with NBC's coverage of events, and often strikingly different.

Overnight also features reports from NBC affiliates around the country (KMTV's Bev Chapman has been on at least three times).

It's Ellerbee and Schechner, however, who are the key to the program. They appear to take mischievous delight in tweaking the noses of as many icons as they can find: the U.S. Congress, female mud wrestlers, the Dallas Cowgirls, etc.

Next to Reagan, their favorite target may be the press. Ellerbee, in particular, enjoys spoofing sports jargon: "There was a full slate of games in the big leagues tonight. (Wink.)

That's baseball talk." Oh, well, you had to be there.

Lloyd Dobyns, who has since gone on to do documentary work for the network, took a more serious swipe at a reporter. When cranky Sarah McLendon accused Reagan of ignoring a government report about women, Dobyns zeroed in; he proved that Reagan had, in fact, never received the report and wasn't skirting the issue. Implicit in Dobyns' remark as, "Oh Sarah, shut up and go home."

It was a rare defense of Reagan. True-blue conservatives will no doubt find Overnight's reporting about him to be biased. A better description is this: if Overnight were a liberal newspaper, its front page would be filled, primarily, with depressing news.

And conservatives don't like to hear depressing things. For example, I doubt that few of them stayed to watch a recent story about unemployment in Steubenville, Ohio. The pictures showed the usual lines of laid-off workers, accompanied by the strains of a folk song. "Got a government in Washington that does not give a damn," sang the singer, and Schechner bid us good night with "And so it goes."

"I think it might be fun to run a newspaper!" Thus spake Charles Foster Kane. We won't let you run the Gateway, or use words like spake, but we do need writers. Call 554-2470 or drop by Annex 17. The password is Rosebud.

Rec-ing crew – it's more than a job!

I have been a member of the Rec-ing Crew for the past two years. No, I do not drive in demolition derbies! No, I am not a member of a hit squad! No, I am not a member of an elite mystical organization. Rather, I am a part-time employee of the division of Campus Recreation.

As a freshman business major in search of a much needed job, I became aware of job opportunities within Campus Recreation. Upon completion of the interview process, I learned that I would be selected to become a member of the Rec-ing Crew. Joining fifty other student staff, we were to be involved in the multi-faceted aspects of Campus Recreation programming, such as: aquatics, intramurals, ID checkers, central issue, building managers, office services, supervisors, art and graphics, Outdoor Venture Center and Sport Clubs.

In order to help us become acquainted with various policies and procedures, and to better prepare us for possible emergency situations, Campus Recreation conducts an orientation session prior to each semester.

One of the first things to be accomplished was a review of the Rec-ing Crew manual. This manual, which we maintain for the duration of our employment, contains information pertaining to various rules and regulations of the HPER Building as well as procedures relative to the division of Campus Recreation.

During last semester's orientation, Rick Hancock, of Campus Security, conducted a seminar on theft prevention and explained how students can protect their valuables and report suspicious people to the proper authorities.

Merle Kenny, a safety officer for Campus Security, introduced tips on fighting fires. A volunteer from the Omaha Fire Department was on hand to demonstrate the proper use of fire extinguishers in coping with different types of fires. We took turns practicing our skills in extinguishing fires.

We also received training and instruction in the use of cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Each of us were taught the ABC's of CPR and were certified by the Red Cross for performing this valuable life-saving technique.

Sport clubs enjoy successful semester

The 1982 fall semester saw the Sport Clubs continue on a successful path. Both the won/lost records and an increased number of participants indicated the Sport Clubs were moving in a desired direction.

Soccer (which competes in the fall) posted a 16-3-1 record. This is the eighth time the UNO representative to the Northern States Soccer Conference has won that league's championship. Coach Pete Kassay-Farkas' squad is also the reigning champ of the Concordia Invitational Tournament sponsored by Concordia College of Seward, Nebraska.

Women of UNO made the soccer scene this fall under the direction of coach R. K. Piper. The team played in three games and compiled a 1-2 record. With the positive enthusiasm and dedication displayed by the women, the future of the program looks very promising.

Martial Arts has become a popular entity of the Sport Club program. The Tae Kwon Do club registered 45 members this fall, a substantial increase (continued on p. 4)

Would you let this man take your sister backpacking in Arizona? UNO Outdoor Venture Center specialist Jim Fullerton has led six backpacking trips into the Grand Canyon, and invites UNO students to sign up for his Campus Recreation trek into the canyon over the 1983 spring break.

Budweiser flag football tourney

The University of Nebraska at Omaha was the site of the Region II Collegiate Flag Football Championships. Men's and women's teams from Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, and Missouri were invited to compete. The winners and the runners up received bids to the National Tournament in New Orleans, Louisiana as part of the Sugar Bowl classic.

The University of Iowa representative emerged as the undefeated champion of the double elimination men's tournament. Creighton University's Phi Psi's came from the losers bracket only to be defeated by Iowa in the finals. Both teams did compete in the National Tournament in New Orleans. UNO's representative (Bill's Team) finished third.

The women's bracket consisted of four teams. These represented the University of Nebraska at Omaha, University of Nebraska at Lincoln, University of Iowa, and Creighton University. The format for the women's bracket was a round robin tournament where each team plays the other teams once. Creighton University finished first with a 3-0 mark. Runner up Iowa was 2-1. UNO was awarded the sportsmanship trophy.

The University of Nebraska at Omaha and the School of HPER was voted to be the host school for the 1983 Budweiser Regional Flag Football Tournament.

Venture center offers rentals, trips

"If adventure has a final and all embracing motive it is surely this: we go out because it is in our nature to go out, to climb the mountains and sail the seas, to fly to the planets and plunge into the depths of the oceans. We extend ourselves, we expand our being."

— Wilfrid Noyce
Lure of the Himalaya

If adventure is stirring within your soul, a visit to the Outdoor Venture Center could help to satisfy your cravings for excitement. The OVC now provides the UNO community with outdoor equipment rentals, and organized trip programs, as well as serving as an outdoor recreation resource center with maps, brochures and information for the aspiring adventurer.

For winter fun you can come in and rent a toboggan or a pair of cross-country skis. What? You don't know how to use cross-country skis? Then be sure to sign up for one of the workshops for beginning Nordic skiers planned in January and February.

Organized trips for spring 1983 include a backpacking trek in the Grand Canyon over spring break, a canoe trip on the Niobrara River April 8-10, and The Great UNO Outdoor Venture Center Map and Compass Orienteering Race on April 23.

Rec-ing crew – it's more than a job!

Campus Recreation also offers in service training sessions for its employees. The purpose of these sessions is to provide programs that will contribute to student staff personal development. Recently, a well known clinician spoke to us on the topic of leadership. We were involved in various skits and games in order to illustrate the importance of communication and cooperation in the leadership process.

As one can see, Campus Recreation offers students a quality experience. Besides offering part-time work, Campus Recreation goes an extra step by providing social and educational opportunities that help to enrich and to increase our individual potential. Maybe there is something to the often used term "Something for Everyone."

Activities planned for swim center

Looking forward to the spring semester, there are many activities and programs planned for the Aquatics Center. The Learn-to-Swim Program, Early Bird Swim and Open Recreation activities will continue as usual. The spring will also see the introduction of the Water Follies which will include innertube basketball and the Big Splash and Belly Flop Contest along with a new activity called "Stuff It." If you would like to take part in these activities, consult the spring schedule of events.

The Third Annual Intramural Swimming and Diving Meet will be held on March 15. The meet promises to be even bigger and better than the past. Start arranging your teams now and getting into shape. Check with Dan Wax or Paul Cerio to find out the order of events and any additional information regarding the swim meet.

January and February will be extremely busy months in the Aquatics Center. UNO will host Northeast Missouri State in a men's and women's meet on January 15. On the following weekend South Dakota State University will be in town to swim against UNO. In addition, there will be a United States Swimming Meet during that same weekend. During February, the University of Northern Iowa, UNL and the University of North Dakota will come to town to take on the men and women swimmers. February 10, 11 and 12 will see the Metro High School Swimming and Diving Championship in the Aquatics Center. Many activities are planned so check the schedules for the Aquatics Center activities.

SPORTS CUP AWARD FOR WOMEN

Women do it, too – they play intramurals! The first annual women's sports cup will be awarded at the end of the spring semester 1983. The female team/organization which accumulates the most points according to their respective finishing place in numerous sports will be honored. Sports in which points are awarded for the top three finishers include:

Sport	1st Place	2nd Place	3rd Place
Basketball	100	50	25
Wallyball	50	25	10
Volleyball	100	50	25
Swimming and Diving Meet	50	25	10
Softball	100	50	25

To enter the "Challenge for the Cup" sign up your team by the designated deadline dates. (See the Spring 1983 schedule of Intramural Activities.)

Sport clubs enjoy successful semester

crease from any previous semester. The outlook for the future of all Martial Art organizations appears to be as bright.

In the various Martial Art groups (Tae Kwon Do, Hapkido, and Judo), students receive instruction in the desired art as well as an opportunity to compete in tournaments throughout the Midwest. Instruction and supervision for the clubs are provided by Suk Ki Shin (Tae Kwon Do and Hapkido) and Mike Denney (Judo). Both advisors are highly qualified in performing and teaching these eastern art forms.

Be on the lookout for times and locations of the organizational meetings of the clubs or call Campus Recreation at 554-2539.

The Aquatics Club began their season in the fall. Many bright spots were visible on the men's and women's teams. For the "swimin' women" two members of the Rec-ing Crew were involved in a relay that destroyed the team's previous best by nearly four seconds. Barb Slogr and Mary Leahy were the two who were instrumental in handing Kearney State their first defeat at the hands of UNO in three years. The women's record stands at 5-1.

While the men's team has competed in only two meets, Coach Paul Cerio feels confident about his swimmers. Individual and relay times indicate the men will be competitive in the meets they have scheduled. Presently, the men stand at 1-1 with a second place finish in the Jackrabbit Relays.

Come out and show your support by attending the remaining home meets. All home meets are held in the HPER pool.

Wallyball will be intramural sport

Wallyball will be offered as an intramural sport for the first time this spring. Since the game has only been in existence five years, many people have never heard of it. Wallyball is volleyball played on a racquetball court. Each team can consist of from two to four players. Bank shots off the walls are legal.

A wallyball is the size of a volleyball and has the texture of a racquetball. The world Wallyball Association sanctions play and has organized tournaments in several countries. Both Creighton University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln have offered wallyball as an intramural event for two years.

The rallies are very exciting in wallyball because there is more contact with the ball, and of course, the walls create more strategy and tactics for the game. Men's, Women's, and Co-Rec leagues will be offered. The sign-up deadline is February 2 and play begins on February 7. Sign up in HPER Room 100 or call 554-2539.

'Rent-a-friend' image a myth

Sororities and frats encourage 'a sense of fellowship'

By Paula Thompson

Parties, preppies and pranks.

These images are typically associated with sororities and fraternities on a dormitory campus. There aren't any dorms at UNO, but "Greek" life provides a way for students to get involved.

Brad Fillbach was bored at UNO and for him, joining a fraternity was the answer.

"A lot of people call it rent-a-friend, but the people that say that are the people that haven't experienced it," Fillbach said.

UNO has 13 Greek social organizations. The four sororities are Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Sigma Kappa and Zeta Tau Alpha. The nine fraternities are Lambda Chi Alpha, Omega Psi Phi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Tau Gamma, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Theta Chi.

Willie Munson, advisor to student organizations, said fraternities and sororities offer a style of education that goes along with classroom education to develop "a more well-rounded person."

Last semester 2.8 percent of UNO's enrollment was involved in a fraternity or sorority. Sorority membership totalled 197 while 229 were in fraternities.

The purpose of these groups is not strictly social. The groups have parties and formal dinner dances and meet in between classes in The Donut Hole. But the groups also raise thousands of dollars each year for charity and help raise money for the university at the UNO Alumni Telefund. Most groups also stress academics and encourage campus involvement.

Fillbach said through his involvement with Lambda Chi Alpha, he "met a lot of neat guys and new people."

Linda Haile, Chi Omega, thinks being in a sorority at UNO is helpful.

"They give you directions and connections as far as school goes, especially as an incoming freshman. You're not alone — you get support and encouragement," Haile said.

Tau Kappa Epsilon member Mike Schwerts said the Greek groups are "good for building leadership and decision-making qualities." His fraternity helped him around campus with things such as registration.

Schwerts feels one of the most important things to be gained from a fraternity or sorority is a sense of fellowship.

"Without being involved in a student group you get a lot of alienation," Schwerts said.

"I've gained a lot of friendships I never thought I could make at UNO," said Jane Milone, Zeta Tau Alpha. Milone also said "you can take classes together and make school more fun."

Jim Hoing, Pi Kappa Alpha, also joined to meet people and make new friends. He sees the fraternity advantageous because of "all the things that come with friendship like connections now and later in life."

Greg Anderson, Sigma Phi Epsilon, has learned to deal with people better in public and on business terms. He said "it's a break away from school and the same old routine."

Angie Mercier, Alpha Xi Delta, compared her sorority to a corporation. She has learned to work with various types of people. "I've learned at formal meetings that we all have to stick together and work as a team," said Mercier.

Anyone interested should sign up in room 250 in the Student Center.

UNO saves $30,000 during holidays

Last year UNO saved more than $30,000 in utility bills by closing down unused sections of buildings for 12 days during the holidays.

This year the campus closed for 10 days from Dec. 14 through Jan. 2 to avoid additional utility bills and to conserve energy. Lighting and heat were kept to a minimum in several UNO buildings and offices during the holidays as well as the Peter Kiewit Conference Center.

The only services kept in 24-hour operation during the holiday closure were the power plant and Campus Security.

The total savings by this year's closure are currently undeterminable, according to Nick Combs, manager of utilities services. Utility bills during that time have not yet been received. Combs said the savings of $30,000 last year were compared to 1977-78, when the campus stayed in full operation during the holidays.

"The cost of utilities has gone up considerably" since 1978, said Combs. "We don't compare today's dollars against 1979 dollars." Energy usage today was compared to the amount of energy used in 1978, he added.

The units of energy (kilowatts) not consumed are multiplied by today's cost in order to release a figure that people can understand, said Combs. "Most people don't understand kilowatts and other terms of energy," he said.

Custodial and maintenance crews were also given time off during the holiday, said Combs.

The utility crew stayed on the job. "It's not much of a break for us," said Combs.

Work that would have been difficult to complete during the regular semester was finished over the break, according to Combs. Modification of exhaust systems in chemistry and biology labs would not have been done otherwise. Combs said installing the exhaust systems was noisy work and would have distracted students.

Other work completed was the lowering of ceilings in Engineering 101, and the installation of new lighting systems.

Combs said both of these jobs were performed to help conserve energy. Lowering ceiling reduces the total amount of cubic space necessary for heating and cooling purposes, said Combs.

Combs added that fluorescent lighting replaced the inefficient incandescent lighting system in room 101, which should further reduce energy consumption.

News Briefs

UNO and the Omaha Public Schools recently formed a liaison committee.

The OPS-UNO Educational Liaison Committee for the improvement of Education was created to improve communication between the two institutions. It will also address problems in education and similar concerns of both educational bodies.

"The problems of education do not come nicely packaged in discrete years — elementary, high school, college," said Donald Myers, dean of college education. Children with difficulties in the secondary school face these problems when they enter college, he added.

Committee members are J. Stephen Hazlett, assoc. dean of the College of Education, Larry Albertson, associate professor/chairperson of teacher education, Katherine Kasten, instructor of educational administration, supervision and foundation, all from UNO, OPS members include Margaret Fitch, Irving Young, Edward Klima, and Ellen Coffey.

Physical game, defense cited by Hanson

Basketball team splits conference openers

By Paula Thompson

A good team effort and strong defense helped the UNO Mavericks build a 1-1 record in the North Central Conference as they swept past Augustana 79-66 Saturday night at the UNO Fieldhouse.

"I'd like to shout about this game," said Coach Bob Hanson.

"I thought our kids played great defense. It was a very physical game with a lot of bumping and knockdowns," Hanson said.

Maverick forward Jeff Fichtel grabbed 12 rebounds as UNO out-rebound Augustana 35-25.

But Hanson said one key to the win was the scoring comeback of Dean Thompson. Thompson scored a game high 21 points after hitting only three points against South Dakota State the previous evening.

"I had faith he would," said Hanson, "but I wasn't sure when."

"We watched film of last night's game and of last year's game," said Hanson. "He got his confidence back, that's a big key."

Augustana took control of the tip and Viking John Anderson scored two quick baskets to give Augustana the lead. With 9:12 left in the first half, Terry Sodawasser hit a basket to tie the game at 12. Ricky Keys then broke away down the court and stuffed home a shot to put UNO up 14-12.

UNO's Dave Felici moved to the basket with two points to pull the Mavs ahead 28-23 with 3:02 left in the half.

Thompson hit two consecutive baskets to give UNO a 32-23 lead with 1:48 remaining. Augustana scored four points in the last seven seconds to trail only by three points at the half.

"We shot the ball a lot better than we've been doing and we moved the ball a lot," said Hanson. "It was definitely a team effort."

The Mavericks held the lead 99 percent of the time during the second half. UNO fell behind only once when Viking Mark Gordon scored giving Augustana a 51-50 lead, but Keys drove down the middle of the court and put in a basket to give UNO the lead for good.

Thompson connected on nine of 15 from the field and hit three of four free throws. Sodawasser shot five of eight from the field and sank six of nine at the line to total 16 points.

The Maverick win over Augustana contrasted the previous night's 55-54 loss to South Dakota State.

UNO shot 39.6 percent from the field hitting only 21 out of 53 attempts. Thompson, who averaged 16.8 points per game going into the contest, hit only one of 12 from the field and one of two free throws scoring only three points.

"The ball just didn't drop for us," said Hanson.

Up and away . . . UNO's Dave Felici (25) fires in a basket against South Dakota State as Jeff Fichtel (on floor) battles three Jackrabbit defenders.

In the NCC Holiday Tournament, South Dakota State edged UNO 69-68. Mark Tetzlaff, a 6-6 forward, scored 23 points for South Dakota State and was named most valuable player of the tournament by the Associated Press. The Mavs held him to 17 points on Friday, however.

"We tried to minimize the effectiveness of Tetzlaff. We worked extremely hard on him," said Hanson.

The lead changed hands several times throughout the game and UNO led at the half 34-28.

The Mavs opened the second half with a basket by Mike Millies and Dwayne King's steal and subsequent lay-in to put UNO ahead by 10. But the Jackrabbits rolled off 12 straight points to lead 40-38 with 13:25 left.

The Mavs regained the lead 43-42 when So-dawasser hit two free throws with 11:17 left.

After Sodawasser fouled Jackrabbit forward Mike Round, Hanson drew his second technical foul of the game. Round hit three out of four at the line to put South Dakota up by two.

UNO pulled ahead one final time with 2:27 left when Thompson hit a free throw to make the score 54-53. A final swish by Round, however, sent the Jackrabbits home with a conference win.

Lady Mavs 'come of age', win two at Miami Invitational

While at the University of Miami Jamboree Jan. 2-6, UNO women's basketball coach Cherri Mankenber said she witnessed the best comeback effort she has ever been involved with. On Jan. 3, the Lady Mavs defeated Florida International 55-53.

Mankenber said UNO had a "terrible" first half. At halftime, the Lady Mavs trailed 35-16, but after a serious halftime talk, UNO turned the tables.

"They fought with every ounce of energy and they dominated every facet of the game during the second half," said Mankenber.

"They stayed with the game plan and showed a lot of character and confidence," Mankenber said.

The Lady Mavs held Florida International, a team averaging 98 points per game, to 18 points in the second half. UNO scored 39 to pull out the two point win.

On Jan. 2, UNO lost to the College of St. Francis 60-59. Despite the loss, Mankenber said "it was a real good trip."

The Lady Mavs defeated Oklahoma State 62-58 in overtime in their last game in Miami.

A free throw by Tammy Castle with 10 seconds remaining sent the game into overtime.

Ronda Motykowski scored with 58 seconds left in overtime to put UNO ahead 60-58. Sue Weiger insured the win by hitting two free throws with 15 seconds left.

Beating a Division I team was a great boost for the Lady Mavs. "They played two super halves," said Mankenber.

Both teams shot 34 percent from the field. But UNO hit 69 percent at the line compared to 56 percent by Oklahoma State.

Mary Henke Anderson and Vicki Edmonds fouled out, but Mankenber said UNO's bench strength helped in overtime.

Mankenber said the games against Florida International and Oklahoma State made the trip worthwhile. "The players came of age on that trip," said Mankenber.

The Lady Mavs, 8-5, will meet Northwest Missouri Jan. 14 at the UNO Fieldhouse. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

King leads UNO in tourney

UNO Basketball Coach Bob Hanson said the Mavericks "played up and down" during the North Central Holiday Tournament held Dec. 29-31 in Sioux Falls, S.D. The team finished sixth in the tournament after winning the title last December.

King

The Mavericks posted a 72-65 victory over St. Cloud State on Dec. 30 after losing 69-68 the previous day to South Dakota State. On Dec. 31, UNO fell to North Dakota State 85-74 squaring their season's record at 5-5.

With 6:58 left in the South Dakota game, the Mavs led 62-55. But UNO missed four free throws in the last 1½ minutes of the game and the Jackrabbits pulled within one point with :31 seconds left. An 18-footer by South Dakota guard Todd Swanson with six seconds left won the game for the Jackrabbits.

In the first half against St. Cloud, the lead changed hands several times, but the Mavs took a 27-26 halftime lead into the locker room.

The lead switched hands again in the second half, but with 10:43 remaining, Dean Thompson broke a 44-all tie with a basket. With 9:39 left, Terry Sodawasser stole the ball and passed to Dwayne King who drove to the basket for two points and was fouled. King's free throw put UNO ahead 49-44. UNO widened the margin 51-44 with 9:14 left when Thompson fed Sodawasser for two points. From then on the Mavs kept a healthy lead.

King, a freshman guard, was high scorer for UNO against both South Dakota State and St. Cloud. Against the Jackrabbits, King hit five of six from the field and three of five free throws for 13 points. King scored 15 in the St. Cloud game by shooting six of 10 from the field and three of three free throws. King added four points in the North Dakota State game for a tournament total of 32.

Junior Jeff Fichtel, Freshman Ricky Keys and Thompson each contributed 13 points against North Dakota State.

UNO led by 10 with 11:24 left in the first half, but at halftime the Mavs were only up by four. With 3:45 left in the game a basket by North Dakota State's Jeff Askew sealed the Bison victory.

Cheerleaders win tourney

Marylou Gouttierre, cheerleader advisor, said UNO's squad "showed a lot of spirit."

"We won because we were cheerleaders. We showed variety and kept things moving all the time," said Gouttierre. "Some squads did dance routines and didn't yell or do vocals," she said.

The UNO squad performed a routine which mixed traditional cheers with gymnastics and partner stunts. They will repeat the routine during half-time of the Maverick basketball game on Jan. 15.

Wrestlers defeat Northern Colorado

UNO heavyweight wrestler Mark Rigatuso suffered his first loss of the season Saturday night at the Air Force Invitational in Colorado Springs, Col. The UNO team, however, finished third in the team standings.

Rigatuso, 14-1, was pinned by Jim Etzler of Fort Lewis in 3:40. Rigatuso was leading in the match 6-1 before suffering the pin. The UNO wrestler recovered to defeat Air Force's Chris McElroy at 2:37 for a third place finish.

Mark Manning won the 150-pound limit by defeating Mark Kristoff of Southern Illinois-Edwardsville 7-4 to up his season's record to 19-1.

Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, however, won the team competition by scoring 92½ points. Adams State placed second with 64 points, while UNO was third with 63½. Wyoming was fourth with 41, Northern Colorado was fifth with 29, Southwest Missouri sixth with 19, Air Force seventh with 15 and Fort Lewis ninth with 11 points.

Three UNO wrestlers were second place finishers in their weight divisions. Lewie Massey in the 134-pound division, Rick Heckendorn in the 177-pound limit and Greg Wilcox in the 190-pound class all finished second.

Phil Pisasale placed third in the 126-pound class, while Mark Weston and Russ Pierce, finished fourth in the 118 and 167-pound divisions, respectively.

On Friday, UNO blasted Northern Colorado in a dual meet 40-7. Rigatuso led UNO by scoring a pin over a former high school teammate. Rigatuso pinned Reese Freeman at 4:19 in their heavyweight match. Both wrestlers graduated from Omaha Central High School.

Weston got UNO off to a good start by pinning Carl Barday at the 6:49 mark. Pisasale followed with a 12-5 decision over Sonny Bochicha. Tim Antisdel of Northern Colorado scored a 4-3 decision over Massey.

UNO won the next two matches by wide margins. Bob Hoffman scored a 14-0 major decision over Mike Martin in the 142-pound limit and Manning followed by destroying Jeff Herring 30-4. UNO's Curt Ramsey was defeated by Lonnie Paulson 13-3, but that was the final victory for Northern Colorado against UNO.

Pierce defeated Mike James 11-3, Heckendorn scored a major decision over Jay Hundley 23-5 and Wilcox won the 190-pound limit by forfeit.

UNO next wrestles at the Southwest Missouri Invitational at Springfield, Mo. Jan. 21 and 22.

Raiders, Redskins to meet in Super Bowl

This article includes opinions of the author.

By Roger Hamer

The Los Angeles Raiders will win the 1983 Super Bowl. Al Davis' forces of darkness always seem to find a way to win, be it a forward fumble or the possibility that society frowns on the Raiders' organization.

In their game this week with the New York Jets, another team that figured to qualify for the Super Bowl, the Raiders will again devise some last ditch effort to pull out a win over the "Not Yets." L.A. will win it 24-21.

In the other AFC game, a rematch of last year's most exciting game will take place. San Diego, a 41-38 winner over Miami last season, has been expected to win the Super Bowl for the past three years. Make it four. Miami will remember last season's game and will come out on top 30-20. Dan Fouts and Air Coryell will remain the only playoff team that has not played in a Super Bowl.

In the NFC, the best game pits the Green Bay Packers against America's Team, the Dallas Cowboys. The Pack has not qualified for the playoffs since 1972 and Dallas always seems to play their best in the playoffs. The Pack is still not back Dallas 35, Green Bay 17.

The final playoff game will be a definite yawner. Washington, the best team in the NFC, will qualify for the Super Bowl by blasting the pass heavy Minnesota Vikings 38-10 and sweep by Dallas in the championship game 21-17.

If the rock hard Redskin defense holds up for three more games, Washington may have a chance against the Raiders, who will beat Miami 24-14.

However, the Raiders feed off animosity and their recent move to L.A. provides them with the stimuli necessary to win the Super Bowl 28-14.

BREAKING AWAY - 1 hour, 41 minutes. Peter Yates' poignantly sweet 1979 comedy sleeper stars Dennis Christopher as an Indiana teenager overcoming insecurity by imagining himself an Italian bicycling champion. His faith in dreams fires his fellow awkward friends, carrying the social burden too of being poor "Cutters" sons, into finally realizing their fantasy of bettering the smart, upper-class wise-acres from Indiana U. in the Little 500 bicycle relay race.

Friday, Jan. 14, at 5:15, 7:30 and 9:45 p.m.
Saturday, Jan. 15, at 7:30 and 9:45 p.m.

SUNDAY Double Feature.

THE 400 BLOWS - 1 hour, 38 minutes. Francois Truffaut's 1959 French New Wave pillar follows Antoine, a boy rebelling against parental neglect, who's abandoned to reform school. He escapes . . . only to confront an uncertain future . . . trapped between the forbidding sea and pursuing guards.

LA BETE HUMAINE - 1 hour, 30 min. Jean Renoir's 1938 French social drama stars Jean Gabin as, virtually, Truffaut's grown-up Antoine . . . a man adrift amidst an inner storm of self-doubt and hatred by painful childhood memories.

Sunday, Jan. 16. The 400 Blows shown at 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. La Bete Humaine shown at 4:30 and 9 p.m.
